

My Observations From A Non-Pilot
Shandrice Woodside Rolle

It has been brought to my attention that some of our pilots/fa are caught up in "the misery loves company story" that is in the media lately.

I am not telling anyone what to do - after all, what you do is your God given rights.

However, since some people don't think and analyze things for themselves, here are just a few observations from someone who can think for herself.

- 1) I would question the instigator - what are their positions and do you want to be in their shoes?
- 2) We are in a small country whose budget is less than 1 wealthy person in America. The depressed economy rocked the great USA - who are we?
- 3) You work in a market that depends on people to fly. So why drive them all away by telling them "you" are flying an unsafe aircraft???
- 4) Even I know that a pic is responsible for his/her aircraft - so if I have a pilot that is flying an unworthy aircraft - why would I want to fly with you?
- 5) Once you drive them all away, who is going to pay your salary?
- 6) You also work in one of smallest industries in this country or region for that matter. Once you kill the two or three main goose that feeds your family, where will you work? Let me answer this one for you; maybe some of you will be willing to move to Dubai or Africa to fly like your counterparts in Jamaica. Or you can find another career - I know I can always start another business.
- 7) Do you think Bahamasair will take all of you? An already cash strapped government airline with tons of pilots who want to see all of you without jobs, so that they can enjoy the glory days Bahamasair use to enjoy before a Western Air or Sky Bahamas and demand more money. I know some of them can only fly for Bahamasair, do you think they like your independence/freedom to fly anywhere in the world. Seems to me you would be a threat to them.
- 8) To those pilots that I schooled from scratch - thank you for making me wiser.
- 9) Will you be the one who recognize that misery loves company before it is too late?
- 10) Or will you be the one who recognize that the grass is not greener or the other side? Let me answer this one for you to: the grass is only green where you water it.
Have a productive day!
